Dear Anne I am extremely thankful that the weather seems at last like clearing. It is quite warm to what it was. I have been out all the afternoon and found it very comfortable. I called at Morris this afternoon and found that Mr Smith of Bowdoin College had made a long call in the morning. they talked metaphysicks & admired one another. I then went to the Rooms & paid your 5-0 cents which Mr Gray received thankfully. Wilson is keeping the office & very grand he is. Mr Walcott a brother from far up in the country, Mr Shipley, Mr Gray, & Mr Spencer were all the brethren off to Newburyport. Went to the library & Brewsters lent me A Theological Review edited by Leonard Woods Jr containing a piece on Religious Altruism which I have not yet read, but presume it is something like. Called at the Commodors & found that Angelina is going in the morning. Lucinda Otis called to see you & go to the Monthly Concert with you. Caroline has a bad cold & did not want to go, so I took her along with me & called for Ann Chapman. Brother Porter took the lead & did very well. He prayed that the slaves of the far South might not be tempted to rise & join the Indians. Every thing is so favourable however that he fears they will. All communication between Georgia & Alabama is nearly cut off. Henry Grew Brother Haines & a strange man spoke & prayed indifferently well. While they were taking up the collection brother Porter stated that the presbyterian synod met in Pittsburgh, & by a majority of 3 or 4 chose a slaveholder for the president. I am afraid I shall not be able to send the sutter, for I can't find out about it & Caroline rather hesitates. Do let us hear soon. I shant be easy about you till I hear. It is near 12 & I can hardly keep my eyes open for sleepiness yours in love. D M

Caroline is writing to Thompson. Spencer has been detained by the weather. Aunt Mary tried to cut off the bush but could not, you had better get a new one.

I hardly think we shall be able to get a church of any kind to hold our meeting in. through Miss Ball hopes to get the Odeon.
